Represents and defends clients in premises liability, products liability, trucking liability, and toxic tort liability matters and related litigation.

Bio

Edward A. Smallwood is a Principal in the Firm's Casualty Litigation Department and represents and defends clients in premises liability, products liability, trucking liability, and toxic tort liability matters, and related litigation. His clients include energy and utility companies, including electric utilities and oil, mining, construction, and transportation companies. He also handles all phases of litigation and serves as National Coordinating Counsel overseeing toxic tort litigation throughout the country.

Mr. Smallwood is an experienced litigator with more than 20 years of experience representing clients in an array of litigation matters in state and federal courts in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. This includes litigation involving electrical contact, fire and explosion, construction, and property damage. He has represented a variety of Fortune 500 utility and mining companies in litigation matters that include catastrophic injury, deliberate intent, and wrongful death matters. He also actively defends credit unions in financial and commercial litigation, including claims arising from the ADA, FDCA, and state consumer credit protection statutes and handles commercial disputes between electrical utility clients and other utility providers.

Mr. Smallwood is a frequent speaker at conferences that address toxic tort, utilities, and mass litigation and is currently national coordinating counsel for multiple product manufacturers in asbestos litigation.
